Celebrating 70 Years of JCNA

IJF REGISTRATION UPDATE

Submitted by Dave Kirkman

We currently have over seventy cars registered for the International Jaguar Festival with fifty some entered in the two judged classes. Registration for judged cars ends this coming Sunday, September 7, 2025. So, if you want your car judged, time is of the essence to register. We are leaving Display Registration open another week until Tuesday, September 16. On this date all registrations will close as we have to submit our Saturday and Sunday menu choices.

I am encouraging all of our club members who have not registered for one of the judged classes or to come and show your Jaguar in the non-judged Display Class. Registration is easy at www.jcnaif.com. This is an excellent opportunity to celebrate the Jaguar marque, visit the exceptional Savoy Automobile Museum, and support your local North Georgia Jaguar Club.

Duesenberg Docent Tours

Submitted by Dave Kirkman

The Duesenberg automobiles on display at the Savoy are exceptional. We have made arrangements with Mary Agrusa, Savoy Historian, to conduct private tours of this unique collection and tell the captivating stories behind the cars and their unique owners.

We are planning the tours for Friday and Saturday at 2:30pm and they will last about thirty minutes. Your IJF registration does not include daytime admission to the museum unless you are a Savoy member. We have arranged for the group rate of $17.00 per person. Of course, you are encouraged to visit the other museum's exhibits too with the Jaguar race and rally cars taking center stage.

If you have registered for the Friday evening Tireside Chat and/or the Saturday night banquet your afterhours admission to the museum is covered Mary will be conducting a Duesenberg tour at 6:30pm for those attending the banquet.

IJF Silent Auction

Submitted by Dave Kirkman

George Camp, with help from Craig Kerins, our Regional Director, will host a Silent Auction at the Coventry Foundation Tent on Saturday, September 27, with proceeds going to support the Foundation. All of us have a Jaguar item or two that should find a new home and this is an excellent way to support the Coventry Foundation.

George has asked that you take a picture of any items you wish to donate and email to him at scjag@juno.com.

Letter from the President

We didn't have any Club events in July because it was too hot. September is a different story with car shows at the beginning and end of the month.

The next major Club car show is the Atlanta British Car Fayre on September 6, commonly referred to as the Norcross Car Show. Based on past years' experience, I anticipate close to 200 British marque cars. If it's too late to register online at atlantabritishcarfayre.com, you may want to try day-of registration. The pipe band will be back as well as a Beatles tribute band. The cost is $30 for the first car and $25 for each additional car. There will be four awards: Best in Show, Owner's Choice, Featured

Please welcome new members and Philip & Donna Pugliese of Chattanooga, TN.

Marque (Morgan) Owners Choice, and new this year People's Choice Award. As I recall, a Jaguar Mark 10 won Best of Show last year. We had a great Club turnout last year, so please register soon.

If the British Car Fayre doesn't fit into your schedule, the Savoy Museum is also hosting its own car show on September 6 from 8-5 pm. I think the registration deadline was August 22, but you might see if you can still register online at savoymuseum.org.

Everyone is looking forward to the Club's big event of the year—the International Jaguar Festival at the Savoy Automobile Museum in Cartersville, GA on September 25-28. Jaguars will be on display or judged as this will be the largest collection of Jaguars in North America in 2025. Owners from Mexico and Canada will be showing their cars as well as cars from ten states. If you need a little extra motivation to register, Governor Brian Kemp has personally issued a Letter of Commendation praising JCNA and our Club for hosting the IJF. You can also register online through JCNA: www.jcnaijf.com.

com. A special weekend is planned with a Friday evening "Tireside Chat", featuring Jaguar Race Cars, hosted by Ken Gross, Past President of the Peterson Automobile Museum in Los Angeles and author of seven books on collector cars, as well as Wayne Carini, host of Chasing Classic Cars TV show. The IJF will also feature a Concours, Awards Banquet, Rally, Scenic Drive, and possibly a slalom. The museum now has seven Jaguars with race and rally histories coming for the museum's fall and winter display. Photos of Kim McCollough's 1954 XK 120 OTS; George Keller's XKR-RSR race car; Mike Grosso's 1992 XJ220; and Jim Taylor's only surviving all-original D-Type are on page 33 of the July-August Jaguar Journal.

Plans for the Club's December Holiday Party are still being worked out.

Linda Frost will be retiring as Treasurer at the end of the year. If you would be willing to take on this critical role, please reach out to Linda or Dave Peck (404-402-8423 or dhpeck69@gmail.com).

Low-Mileage Jaguar With Royal Connection Heads To Auction

A distinguished slice of royal motoring history the 1960 Jaguar Mk IX Saloon that chauffeured the Princess of Wales and her children to the wedding of her sister, Pippa Middleton, is set to go under the hammer at H&H Classics' inaugural Kelham Hall auction on Wednesday, 10th of September.

The car, which is estimated at £30,000-£35,000, formed part of the wedding transport at St Mark's Church, Englefield, carrying Catherine, Princess of Wales (then Duchess of Cambridge), with Prince George and Princess Charlotte, who took on the roles of page boy and bridesmaid.

Finished in elegant Warwick Grey with red leather upholstery and walnut trim, the Jaguar presents today as still a fine example of the marque, with its interior and exterior being in excellent condition. Despite the car being 65 years old, the odometer records just 31,000 miles from new, supported by an impressive history file and accompanying V5C.

The car can be seen on page 27 in the Kelham Catalog: https://issuu.com/handclassicsadmin/docs/h\_h\_kelham\_hall\_10\_september\_2025

Whatever happened to... the Jaguar C-X75?

TopGear.com

It featured in the James Bond movie Spectre back in 2015, so why was the C-X75 prototype never put into production?

What is it?

A hypercar to celebrate 75 years of Jaguar. A turbine powered engineering hammer blow to make the likes of Ferrari and Lambo look Victorian. Revealed in 2010, interest was high in the stunning Ian Callum design, so Jaguar set about putting it into limited production.

Did they build any?

Having decided using diesel fuelled turbines to make electricity for e-motors was a tad impractical, Jag got

Williams Advanced Engineering to work up an alternative solution: a 1.6-litre turbo and supercharged 4cyl with e-boost to deliver 850bhp, 31 miles of EV running and a 200mph top speed.

It worked! We tested it and were wowed by the massive pace, but Jaguar got cold feet and canned the whole shebang.

Where are they now?

The prototypes were auctioned, and the design was recycled into a Bond villain car for 2015's Spectre. Since then one customer (at great expense) had his refinished with new paint and trim.

2 Charged After Selling Classic Car In Marietta, More Than 100 Miles From Where It Was Stolen

By WSBTV.com News Staff August 21, 2025

MARIETTA, Ga. — The Columbus Police Department has successfully recovered a stolen 1973 Nissan Datsun 240SX and arrested two suspects.

Ashley Herring and David Parr were arrested after the Columbus investigation led officers to Marietta.

The vehicle, which was reported stolen on July 23, from a home on 17th Avenue, held sentimental value for the owner. It belonged to his late father.

The investigation by Columbus police revealed that Herring and Parr sold the car in Marietta using a forged Bill of Sale and the identity of Herring's deceased mother.

Ashley Herring was initially arrested on July 24. After a search of her phone, investigators discovered evidence of the fraudulent sale. The vehicle was recovered by officers on Aug. 4.

Herring was released on bond after her first arrest, but additional charges were filed against both suspects.

On Aug. 6, Herring and Parr were arrested again and booked into the Muscogee County Jail. A Recorder's Court hearing on Aug. 13 found probable cause, and the case has been bound over to Superior Court.

CPD said Herring has a history of selling items that do not belong to her, including previous incidents involving Facebook Marketplace. Investigators said they suspect the stolen vehicle was targeted in a similar manner.

Police said people need to be cautious while buying or selling items through online platforms like Facebook Marketplace and to always verify ownership before finishing a purchase.

"If something feels suspicious or 'too good to be true,' it probably is," Columbus police said.

Jaguar Boss: Where We Go from Here

By Brett Berk, Car & Driver

The British luxury brand garnered attention, and ire, with its radical Type 00 concept. Managing director Rawdon Glover sits down with C/D to explain what comes next.

Rawdon Glover has been on a world tour. Since the splashy reveal of Jaguar's new design identity and Type 00 concept electric GT show car at Art Basel Miami last December, the managing director of the venerable British sport-luxury brand has taken his radical new logo, and radically blunt-nosed show car, on the road.

"We've been to Tokyo, we've been to Munich, we've been to London, we've been to Monaco, we've done a couple of activations in the U.S.," Glover told C/D in a one-on-one sit-down in advance of such an event, in a made-over warehouse, during Monterey Car Week. "And that's an opportunity for us to unpack what we're doing in a bit more detail."

The opportunity is relevant, perhaps even requisite, as the leaping-cat brand raised plenty of eyebrows, question marks, and expletives with its intended shift to lower-case lettering, rosy hues, brutalist styling, and a more upscale, solely EV lineup.

"Miami was incredible in terms of the number of eyeballs on the brand, and the fact that people were actually talking about Jaguar again. But for our ability to explain to the world why we made such a change, how this links to our past and our heritage, and why we've chosen the particular icons we have, places like social media have not been a great platform," Glover says. "Social media is a very binary place. It's love and hate, it's black and white. And it's not great for the kind of context and nuance that are central to what Jaguar is doing."

Instead, representatives of the brand have been meeting in person with key constituencies around the world—enthusiast club members, former Jaguar designers and executives, hand raisers, middle-finger raisers—to explain its intent. Obviously, such interpersonal tactics necessarily self-limit the scale in terms of who can be reached. This, Glover believes, dovetails ideally with the relaunched brand's goals.

"Our foray into the volume premium space, competing largely against the big three Germans—who have massively different economies of scale in manufacturing and purchasing—was a tough place for us to execute in," he says. Instead, the brand looked to its heritage and determined that the times when it was most successful, profitable, and culturally relevant were when it was smaller and more exclusive.

"Great design polarizes," he adds. "If you try to please everybody, chances are you're not going to have lasting design. We don't want to be vanilla. It's a very distinctive design. People need to get in and see themselves in it, because it needs that sense of physicality."

Glover describes the Type 00 concept car as "the purest manifestation of the design language we can expect from Jaguar." The first production vehicle within this new identity will be a $130,000, 1000-hp four-door GT styled like the Type 00 and boasting over 400 miles of EPA range, which will be unveiled late next year.

"The role of the four-door GT is to establish the brand at that price point, because Jaguar today is transacting at roughly half that." For this to occur, a passel of other key initiatives also need to align. "Our product has to be amazing. The driving experience has to be amazing. The client experience has to be amazing. And our product quality has got to be better," Glover says.

Jag doesn't exactly have a stellar reputation in many of these realms. But Glover notes that it is improving. A perusal of independent sources such as the J.D. Power Initial Quality Index demonstrates this. While the brand ranked near the bottom of the list in 2020, marked gains placed it near the top in 2025, just below stalwarts like Lexus. "We've done really well, and I think that's very much the efforts of the last 10 years," Glover says.

We're willing to posit that the brand's plummeting sales and production figures—which are down by more than 50 percent since the start of the decade and likely to hit a record low this year, as it winds down production of existing models completely—have afforded it a bit more attention to detail on each of the few cars it does build.

However, this diminished volume aligns well with Jag's intended production figures post-relaunch, which, according to Glover, will be higher than brands like Lamborghini or Aston Martin, but below those of the premium Germans. Instead, Jaguar will occupy the "white space" that exists where high-end models from Mercedes and BMW end, but beneath the positioning of more exclusive exotics.

This all seems logical. But it is dependent on execution, and people's willingness to follow the brand into this new electrified territory, given past ignominies of its Lucas-built system and multiple recalls of its first electric vehicle, the I-Pace, for battery issues. By way of example, Glover points to his recent experience at the “Gucci Cosmos” exhibition, a global brand experience showcase that he viewed recently in Shanghai.

Another profferer of luxury lifestyle founded in the early 1920s, like Jaguar, Gucci has also had its ups and downs—from representing the jet set elite in the mid-century era, to peddling cheap licensed products at department stores and adorning the interiors of AMC Hornets in the 1970s and 80s. But it has recently phoenixed to primacy in today’s global, monogram-obsessed consumer culture. As such, Glover found its booms and busts and booms inspiring.

“There’s been a whole series of things in that brand, some of which are kind of incredible and iconic, and others . . . less so,” he says. “And I think for us, there are moments in our history, and there are many, that absolutely fit with this context of copy nothing and breaking new ground. Those are the moments that we will build on. And the vehicles will not come along until they’re ready.”
