NEWS & VIEWS

one of the obvious ways of doing this was to persuade Bob to come out to the US west coast to talk to the journalists about his life working at Jaguar and his close association with its founder, Sir William. Getting Bob to do this was not easy. He simply couldn't believe any journalist would be that interested in anything he had to say. I think he only did it in the end to humour me and for that I shall be eternally grateful because he was the hit of the launch.

Bob had the ability to describe something so clearly, eloquently and with such great good humour that his audience was entranced. We had set him up to speak for about half an hour but the journalists were so captivated with Bob that they wouldn't let him go at the end of the session, so we had to set him up for the next session with as much time as the audience wanted. One of my great regrets is that we didn't videotape these sessions, because it was real, direct Jaguar history coming from someone at the top of Jaguar management who had vivid recollections of such things as the Jaguar fire, the chaotic scramble to make the remaining D-Type parts into a road car, the struggles with XJS styling and the sale to BMC.

Bob and his wife, Alison, were a perfectly matched pair. Alison, a successful business executive in her own right and blessed with a similar sense of humor to Bob's, demonstrated this in a letter we received from her a few days ago. Moments after he died, the New Year celebrations started and, as the fireworks exploded, Alison wrote that Bob, if he had lived a few moments longer, would have said, "Alison, you really shouldn't have gone to so much trouble!

It has been said that no man is indispensable. Whoever said it hadn't met Bob Berry.

Poetry Corner
Calling all wordsmiths

Following the publication of five limericks by Alexander Main in the January-February issue, we have received another concourse inspired poem from slalom guru, John Larson. As NCJOC president, John also helps run the Nation's Capital concourse event on the city-center campus of GEICO insurance in Washington, DC. Since man (and woman) shall not live by oil changes alone, we are always keen to publish items of artistic interest. If you or someone you know has penned any suitable verse or prose, please send it through to Jaguar Journal (details on page 3) for publication. Jaguar enthusiasts are, by definition, sensitive to matters of style and elegance, which are bound to surface occasionally in creative endeavors. Concours d'Elégance

Our heritage of cars was on display, so "Please Don't Touch" the Concours signs decreed. The Judges always have the final say.

The smallest imperfections have a way of adding more deductions. We don't need your fingerprints and smudges on display.

The goal is "Factory Fresh," and so we pay; authenticating details to succeed; convincing Judges in their final say.

Now what rewards can possibly defray the debts that we incur until we're freed to share our youthful dreams here on display?

Some semi-rusted barn-find that we may aspire to resurrect seems just to plead for one more chance to hear the Judges say a blessing, so to live another day. We're only just custodians, and cede our prizes to the heritage display, and let some future Judges have a say.
